Week 1:
July 10 – 14, 2017

Session 1: International Economic Law and Environment

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course focuses on the treatment of environmental and health regulation in trade and investment disputes. Its duration is 700 minutes, spread over 5 days in July 2017. Students will learn the basic obligations and exceptions that apply in WTO law and international investment law with regard to environmental regulations. They will apply this knowledge in class to analyze jurisprudence and present legal arguments in fictitious disputes (mini moots).

ABOUT PROFESSORS

Bradly J. Condon (B.A., UBC), (LL.B., McGill), (LL.M., Calgary), (Ph.D., Bond) is the WTO Chair Professor of International Economic Law and Founding Director of the Centre for International Economic Law at ITAM in Mexico City, where he has received several teaching excellence awards. He has served as visiting professor of international economic law at the Permanent Mission of Mexico to the WTO in Geneva, the University of New South Wales in Australia and the University of Victoria in Canada. Prior to his appointment at ITAM, he taught at Simon Fraser University in Canada. He has taught courses for the WTO on WTO dispute settlement to government officials in Geneva and Latin America and served as a consultant to the WTO on multilingual treaty interpretation. He serves as an Advisory Board Member for the Global Trade Law Series, Kluwer Law International and has served as a peer reviewer for Cambridge University Press, Kluwer Law International, Oxford University Press and various international academic journals. He has published seven books and over seventy articles on international trade law and economic integration, including the first treatise on WTO law in Spanish. His most recent book is Climate Change and Global Economic Governance (Oxford University Press, 2013), co-authored with Tapen Sinha and featuring a foreword by Nobel Laureate Robert F. Curl.

Michael Ewing - Chow is a Professor and the WTO Chair at the Faculty of Law, National University of Singapore (NUS). He has a First Class Honours degree in law from NUS and a Masters from Harvard Law School. Prior to joining NUS, Michael worked in Allen & Gledhill, Singapore's largest law firm. He started the first World Trade Law course in Singapore and was involved in the negotiations for some of Singapore's early FTAs. He has been a consultant to the Singapore Government, the ADB, ASEAN, UNCTAD, the World Bank and the WTO. Michael has advised government officials all over the world on trade and investment law as well as governance. He also assisted the Singapore Company Law Reform and Frameworks Committee in 2001 with a major overhaul of corporate law and in 2008 was appointed to a Working Group of the Steering Committee to review of the Companies Act. He continues to be involved in corporate law reform in his role as an advisor to the Registrar of Companies as a Member of the Institute of Corporate Law. He has taught in a number of universities in Asia, Europe and Latin America. He has published papers on governance, trade law and investment law and is on the Editorial Board of the Journal of International Economic Law. He has also been consulted as an expert for UNCTAD's World Investment Report over the last decade. His latest book is "International Trade and Food Security: Exploring Collective Food Security in Asia". Michael also co-founded Aidha, an NGO which provides financial education and microfinance opportunities for domestic migrant workers. For his work, he was the awarded the Social Entrepreneur of the Year 2007. He has received several Teaching Excellence Awards and was awarded the Inspiring Mentor Award in 2009.

Session 2: New Technologies and Consumer Law

COURSE DESCRIPTION

The course aims at analyzing the influence technology has on present day consumers. The shift from offline to online commerce – leading to increased cross border sales –, the influence of Big Data in marketing, the consequences for the power relation between producers and consumers. Starting from a general introduction into the impact technology has on our contemporary society, the course will zoom in on the specific legal and ethical challenges technology brings within the domain of B2C (business to consumer). We hope students can engage in fruitful discussions and relevant legal assessments related to the following question: how new technologies such as predictive analytics are affecting consumer-supplier relations and impacting consumers freedom of choice and contract?

The course will concern New Technologies themselves, legal frames and legal related matters and also will have both European Union and Latin America contractual approaches. In the end, it is expected that students have a wide view of the phenomena and are able to explore both sides of the subjects and discuss present consequences and future legal perspectives according to a global view derived from European and Latin American problems and solutions.

Week 2:
July 17 – 21, 2017

Session 1: Administrative Law in Historic and Comparative Perspective

COURSE DESCRIPTION

Comparative law was traditionally focused on private law: it looked into ways to improve domestic law in such fields as contracts and torts and to make nation laws more similar in order to streamline trade and commerce. Yet in recent years comparatists have turned their attention more into public law. Many have looked into comparative constitutional law, comparing government structures and constitutive documents.

This course has more specific and practical goals: it serves as an introduction to the field of comparative administrative law. We start by observing the huge importance of administrative bodies in most nations' public law; we follow this with an examination of the role of such entities and the various legal tools available to curb administrative excesses and ensure accountability.

We provide an overview of one entire national administrative system of a civil law nation (Brazil) and common law nation (Israel) and a wider view of the way such issues as transparency and public procurement are treated across a wide variety of national, supra-national and international bodies. We hope to provide students better understanding of both the complexity and the benefits of administrative law in a national and comparative perspective.

ABOUT PROFESSORS

Guy Seidman, is a graduate of Tel-Aviv University (LLB, LLM) and Northwestern University in Chicago (LLM, SJD) and has been on faculty at the IDC Herzliya since 1999. Prof. Seidman has published and lectured in various countries in his two main areas of expertise – administrative law and comparative law – and has found the cross between the fields both intellectually challenging and of great practical importance and relevance, which is why he has joined Prof. Jordão in offering the present course.

Eduardo Jordão earned a joint PhD in Public Law from the Universities of Paris (Panthéon-Sorbonne) and Rome (Sapienza). He holds Master of Laws (LL.M) degrees from the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE) and from the University of São Paulo (USP). Prof. Jordão has been a visiting researcher at both Yale Law School and the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law. He has joined the faculty at FGV Law School in Rio de Janeiro in 2013 and has taught on subjects such as Comparative Administrative Law, Regulation and Competition Law. Prof. Jordão has published on a wide range of topics in these areas, both in Brazil and abroad. His last book addresses the topic of the judicial review of administrative action under a comparative perspective (Le juge et l'administration: entre le contrôle et la déférence, Bruxelles, Bruylant, 2016).

Session 2: A Comparative Look at Law of Contract: Civil and Common Law Perspectives

COURSE DESCRIPTION

With the growing demand for international lawyers or national lawyers with a cross-border approach, a comparative training on common and civil law traditions has assumed increasing importance in the global legal fraternity. This course, with its theory and practice sessions, is going to focus on the issues of understanding, interpreting and applying law of contract with an intensely comparative approach. It aims to provide law students from both civil and common law systems a unique understanding of navigating between the two most important legal traditions in the world. In this course, the students will understand the development of legal norms, sources and approach in light of the basic elements of contract law. Following joint interactive sessions, students will participate in a case simulation activity where they will resolve a cross-border contract law case by identifying the relevant laws, applying the laws on practical situations, and presenting legal arguments with a deeply comparative approach. The course duration is 700 minutes.
